

APPENDIX F—RELATED SERVICES

F.0 Publications and Training Materials

IATA Dangerous Goods Training Standards Workbook Series

A series of training standards workbooks are available for training that correspond to well-defined job functions that share similar competencies involved in the carriage of dangerous goods by air. The separate books are:

Workbook 1—Shippers; Packers; Personnel Accepting/Processing Dangerous Goods;

Workbook 2—Flight Crew; Load Planners; Flight Dispatchers;

Workbook 3—Cabin Crew; Passenger Handling Personnel; Security Screening Personnel;

Workbook 4—Ramp and Warehouse Personnel;

Workbook 5—General Cargo Acceptance Personnel (Freight Forwarders, Operators and Ground Handling Agents).

The training standards series of workbooks are designed to assist those developing or validating a dangerous goods training program by providing a benchmark by which to evaluate their courses for content, accuracy and completeness in meeting the legal responsibilities in training personnel involved in the transport of dangerous goods by air. The workbooks may also be used as a supplement to dangerous goods training programs for classroom use. It is anticipated these training workbooks will be adopted by operators and States as the official standards for the establishment of dangerous goods training programs. Currently available in English only.

Guidelines for Instructors of Dangerous Goods Courses—Toolkit

The Toolkit incorporates in one downloadable application:

- Guidelines for Instructors;
- Dangerous Goods Regulations;
- Training Workbooks 1, 2, 3, 4, & 5;
- a fillable Shipper's Declaration PDF file; and

The Guidelines contain detailed instructions for the preparation of dangerous goods courses based upon the IATA Dangerous Goods Regulations. Guidance is provided on the subjects to be covered and the level of detail that should be devoted to each subject. Supplementing the outline and constituting 90% of the Guidelines are recommended teaching aids, background papers for use by instructors, handouts for students and numerous exercises covering each section of the Regulations. The application incorporates hyperlinks that allow the user to move around all the documents that are included in the application. The Toolkit also contains:

- the DGR Quick Reference;
- a 8.5 in × 11 in "Have You Declared It?" self-standing poster;
- a pointer-pen;
- a package of hazard labels; and
- a UN specification fibreboard (4G) box.

Poster on Dangerous Goods Labels

This poster clearly displays the IATA dangerous goods hazard and handling labels which must be used on all packages containing dangerous goods destined to be shipped by air. Labels depicting the hazard of all nine classes of dangerous goods are shown as well as the handling labels. Available in English only.

"Have You Declared It?" Cargo Poster

Undeclared dangerous goods in items declared as "general cargo" continue to pose a risk to safety. For this reason operators and ground handling agents are required, as set out in 9.5.3, to prominently display notices at all points where cargo is accepted. This poster meets those requirements. An international wall poster, 24 in × 36 in (61 cm × 91.4 cm) is available in English, French, Spanish and German. Available in the same size is an English version that meets specific United States Regulations.

A smaller version, 8.5 in × 11 in (21.6 cm × 27.9 cm), with a back support for counter top display is available in English only.

F.1 Electronic Services

△ Dangerous Goods eList

The DGR eList data file contains the entire Subsection 4.2—List of Dangerous Goods along with additional data elements not found in the DGR, such as special handling codes assigned to the entries. Data from the DGR is available in multiple formats including CSV, XLS, and XML. Organisations license the DGR eList to integrate DGR data into their systems for the purpose of automating dangerous goods related tasks, such as validation of the NOTOC information, making the process faster and more efficient. More information regarding the eList can be obtained by writing to

E-mail: publishing@iata.org

△ Dangerous Goods Regulations in Electronic Format (eDGR)

The IATA Dangerous Goods Regulations manual is available in digital format. This format includes all information available in the printed book and includes additional functionality such as: an enhanced search, sort and filter in subsection 4.2.

All digital editions are available exclusively on the single IATA Digital Publications format (Bookshelf) as:

- Single user license (web-based and app)
- Bookshelf Enterprise library

Key benefits of Bookshelf reader:

- offline and online capability on Mac, Windows, iOS and android devices;
- dynamic data table (responsive, filters, sorting, search);
- note and highlights;
- easy navigation and search;
- text-to-speech capability.

More information on the eDGR is available at:
www.iata.org/digital-publications

Dangerous Goods Regulations for Electronic Flight Bags (eFB)

The DGR for eFB is a version of the IATA Dangerous Goods Regulations designed specifically for flight crews and includes only the relevant sections of the DGR making it easier and more efficient for flight crews to reference the regulations.

The DGR eFB provides flight crews with the necessary information to make quick and accurate decisions considering the type and nature of the goods on board, as well as the nature of the problem and the appropriate procedure to follow, supporting the information detailed on the NOTOC.

The DGR eFB is designed for iPad and Android tablets and is available in three formats: ePub, PDF and XML. More information regarding the DGR on eFB can be obtained at:

www.iata.org/en/publications/dgr/eFB/or by writing to

E-mail: publishing@iata.org

Dangerous Goods AutoCheck

Dangerous Goods AutoCheck is a solution which revolutionizes the way in which dangerous goods are accepted. DG AutoCheck is an online application which captures the information from a Shipper's Declaration for Dangerous Goods through either entry of the Shipper's Declaration data electronically, e-DGD, or through the use of optical character recognition (OCR) of the paper Shipper's Declaration. From there, a state of the art rules engine optimizes the acceptance of Shipper's Declarations to deliver faster and more reliable processing to ensure the safe and compliant acceptance of dangerous goods. The system will verify the integrity and completeness of the Shipper's Declaration and provides a pictorial representation of the package, showing all the required marks and labels to support decision making.

Airlines, ground service providers and freight forwarders that have adopted DG AutoCheck benefit from:

- increased acceptance check quality and consistency with the DGR
- immediate application of addenda to the DGR
- verification of all State and operator variations
- interception of compliance-related errors
- significant reduction in DG processing times
- data distribution such as EDI for creation of the NOTOC and error report to the shipper
- avoidance of non-safety related costs
- reduction in resource requirements
- reduction of risk related to regulatory fines for non-compliance

More information regarding DG AutoCheck can be obtained by writing to dgautocheck@iata.org

△ F.3 IATA Dangerous Goods Competency-Based Training and Assessment Centre Program (CBTA Centre)

The Competency-Based Training and Assessment Centre Program (CBTA Centre) is the global certification program on certifying organisations for compliance with the training provisions for dangerous goods under a competency-based training and assessment approach.

The CBTA Centre aims to support organisations across the aviation industry, including operators, civil aviation authorities and training providers, to develop capacity and resources for dangerous goods training programs that meet the requirements of competency-based training and assessment approach in accordance with Dangerous Goods Training Guidelines—Competency-Based Training and Assessment Approach.

The CBTA Centre provides organisations the opportunity to acquire an accreditation from IATA, attesting that their dangerous goods training is validated against the IATA CBTA Centre program's policy, standards and requirements. This accreditation is granted after the organisation's dangerous goods training system, standards, procedures, quality management, material and content have been validated by IATA and found to meet the program's criteria.

Accredited organizations can offer competency-based training solutions to companies and provide internationally recognized qualifications with a co-branded IATA certificate to students that have successfully completed their training course.

The objective of the CBTA Centre is to:

- establish, maintain and monitor a globally recognized accreditation program for competency-based dangerous goods training and assessment on a worldwide basis and in a cost-effective manner;
- support the industry to develop capacity and resources to transition to a competency-based training and assessment approach for dangerous goods;
- enable operators and civil aviation authorities to assess and approve organizations for a dangerous goods training program under a competency-based training and assessment approach;
- address industry concerns and requirements for safe, secure, efficient and sustainable air transport;
- support the industry to develop high-quality and effective training that meets international standards;
- improve the competence of the workforce involved in the transport of dangerous goods by air;
- raise the bar in the industry and give visibility to accredited organisations.

The CBTA Centre Program is suitable for, but not limited to the following entities:

- training organizations, institutes and schools that offer dangerous goods training and solutions to clients;
- training units of operators, airports, ground service providers, freight forwarders and shippers that provide in-house dangerous goods training to their employees.

The CBTA Centre Program consists of three accreditations: CBTA Provider, CBTA Excellence and CBTA Corporate.

CBTA Provider accreditation is given to organisations that offer dangerous goods training to clients within a specific territory or jurisdiction and for specific well-defined job functions. This certification attests that their training course is benchmarked against and meets the IATA's Dangerous Goods Regulations (DGR) training provisions for specific well-defined job functions in accordance with the CBTA guidelines.

CBTA Excellence accreditation is given to organisations that offer solutions and services to the industry for the development of competency-based training and assessment for dangerous goods in accordance with the CBTA guidelines. This certification attests that their training design and development methodology and best practices are benchmarked against and meets the IATA's Dangerous Goods Regulations (DGR) guidelines for the development of competency-based training and assessment for dangerous goods.

CBTA Corporate accreditation is given to organisations, such as airports, airlines, freight forwarders, ground handling agents and shippers, that give in-house training to employees. This certification attests that their training program is benchmarked against and meets the IATA's Dangerous Goods Regulations (DGR) training provisions under the competency-based training and assessment approach.

Organisations interested in having their dangerous goods training programs accredited by IATA are invited to direct their enquiries to:
